

Storyboard art for Outrun, Outwit, Outgun.

Carl and Johnny arrive at the ruins of Memphis. Like every other metropolis on Earth, it was devastated during the alien invasion, and there are survivors who are living among the ruins of these once great cities.

Johnny tackles one of the Brawlers that were chasing the locals while they were out on a supply run. Johnny and Carl seek to do good wherever they are and will always take the time to help those in need.

Carl and Johnny are greeted by the locals who they saved from the Brawlers. They are grateful for the rescue, and the youngest of them offers the boys a drink.

The boys are welcomed into the local's hideout and meet their leaders along with all those who live there. Carl and Johnny are moved by their warmth and friendliness and decide that they will stay to help the locals take down the Beale Street Brawlers.

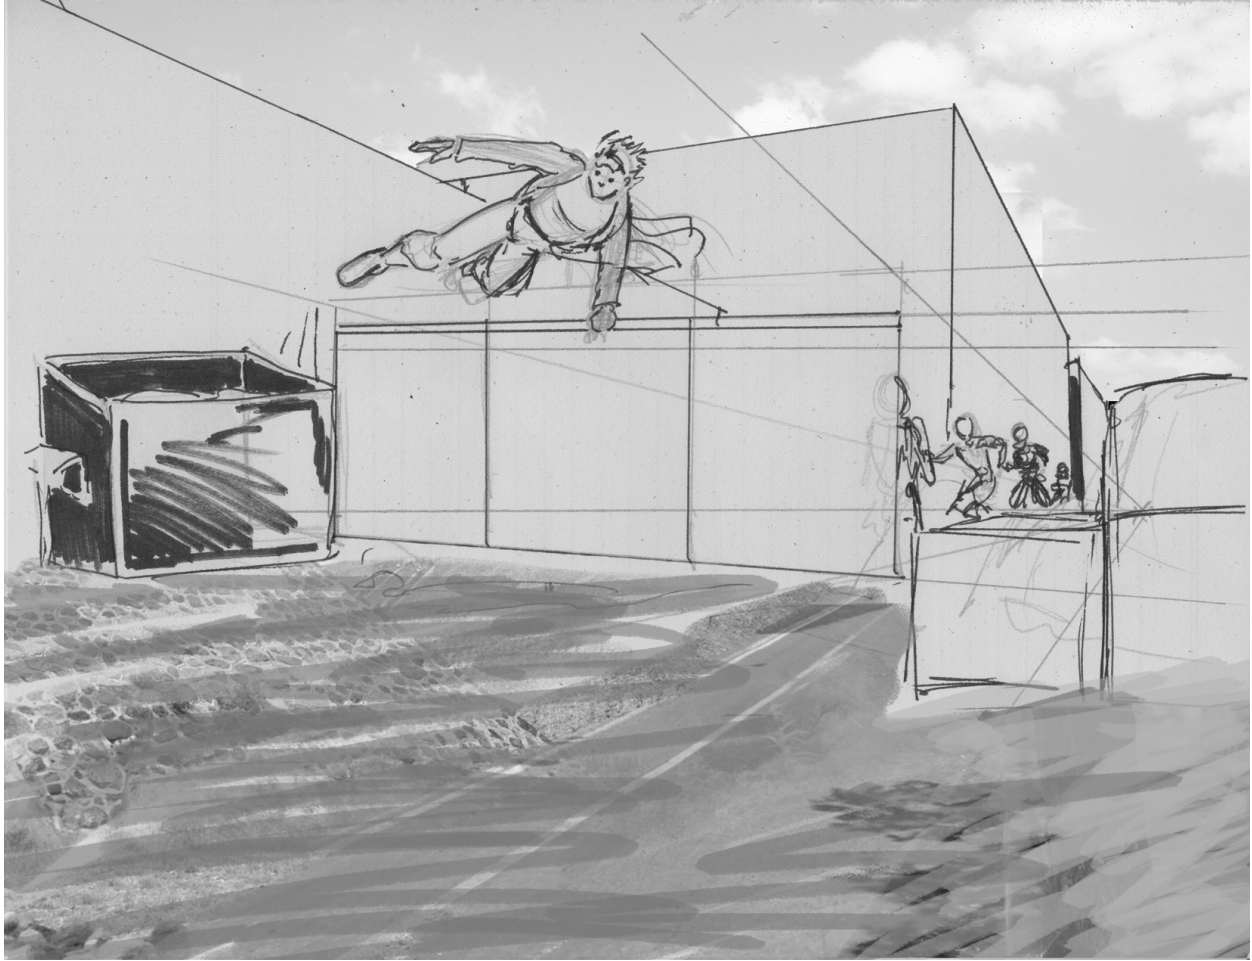

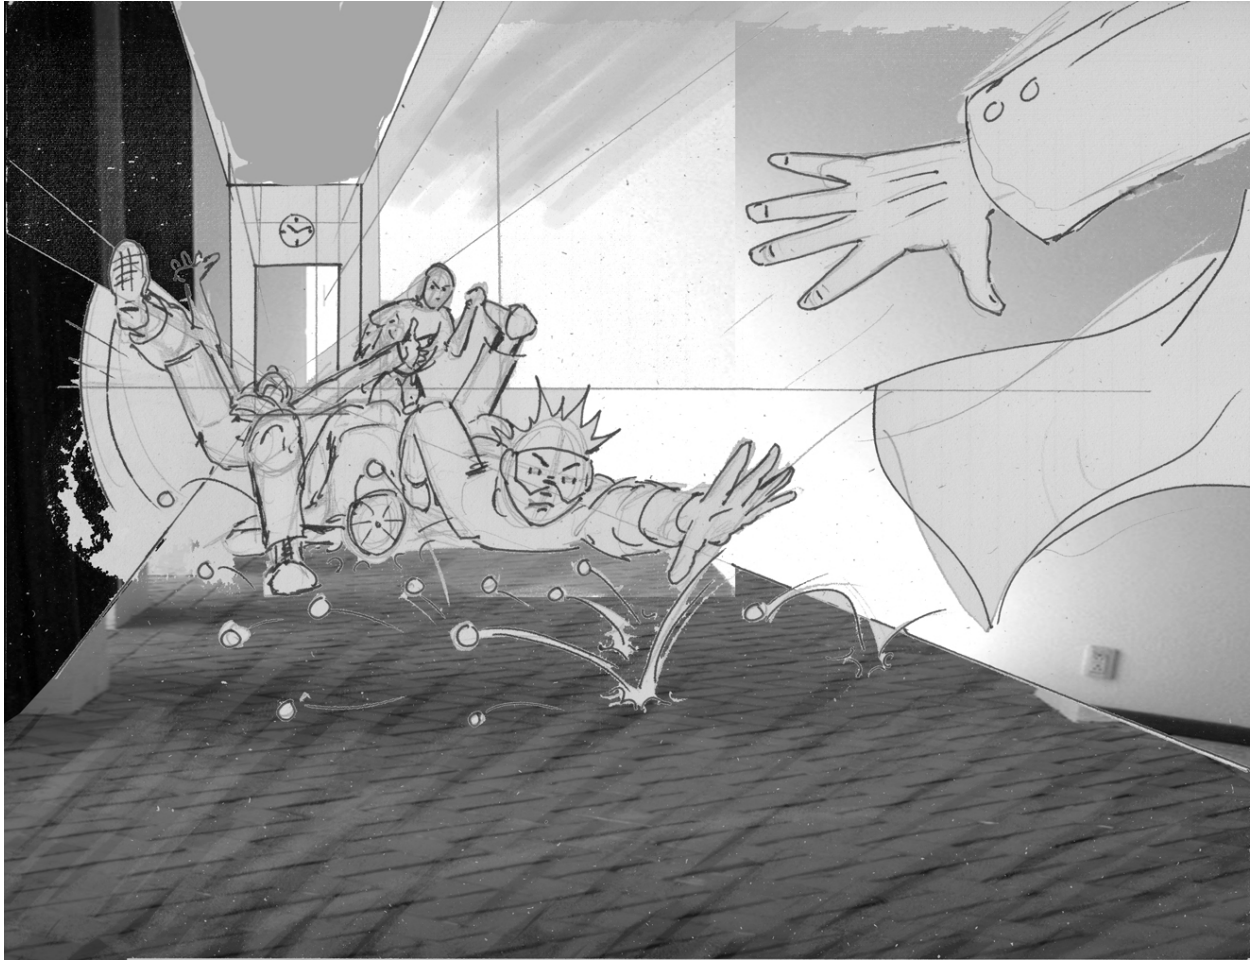

Carl and Johnny educate the locals on tactics, traps, and firearms. They decide to teach them a three-pronged tactic—outrun, if you can't outrun then outwit, and if that fails, then outgun your opponents.

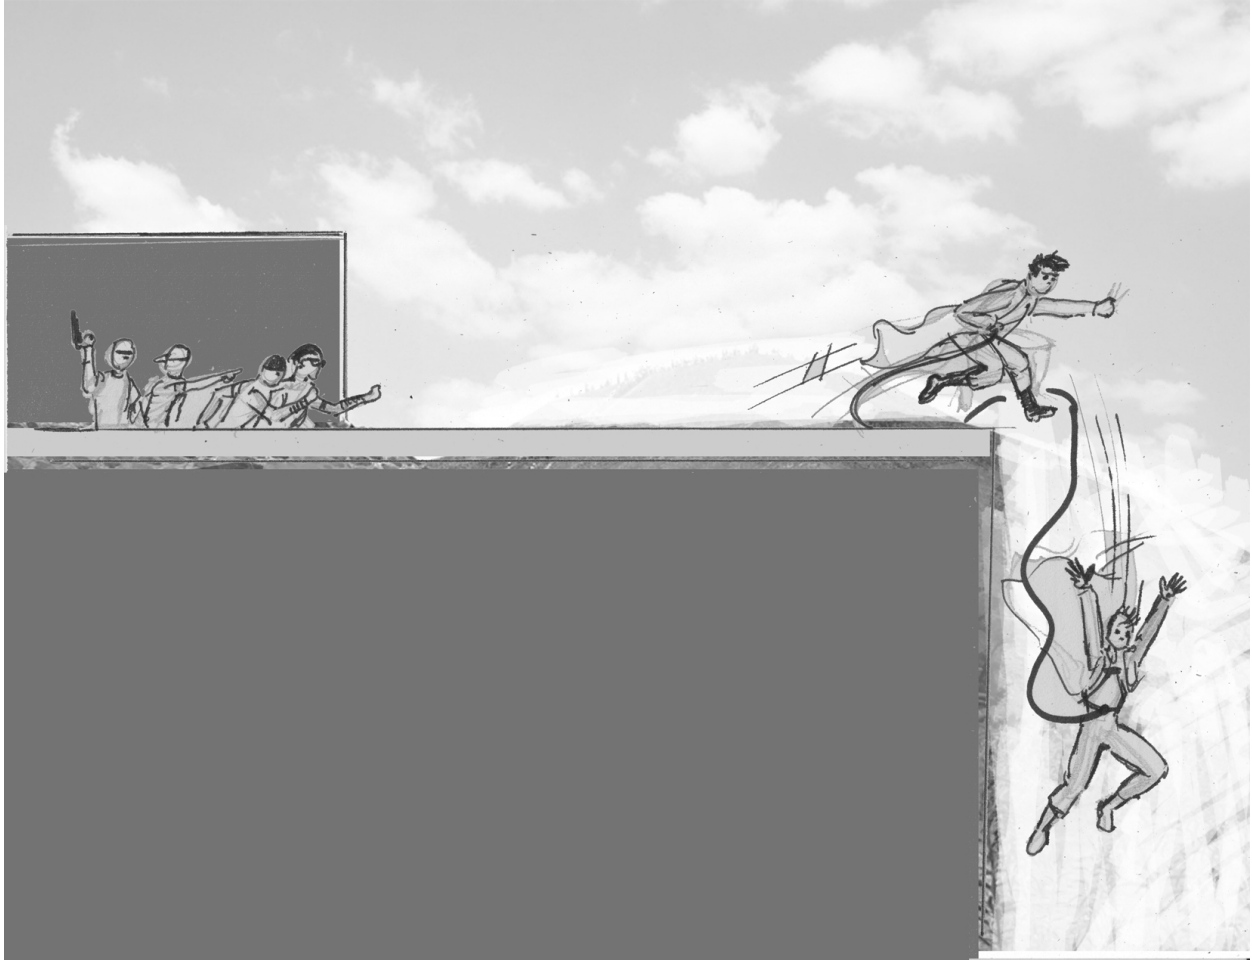

Carl sets up an obstacle course in a pre-designated alley, and plans to draw some of the Brawlers in to demonstrate the tactics that can be used to help you outrun an angry mob, vicious gang, or whatever else may be chasing you.

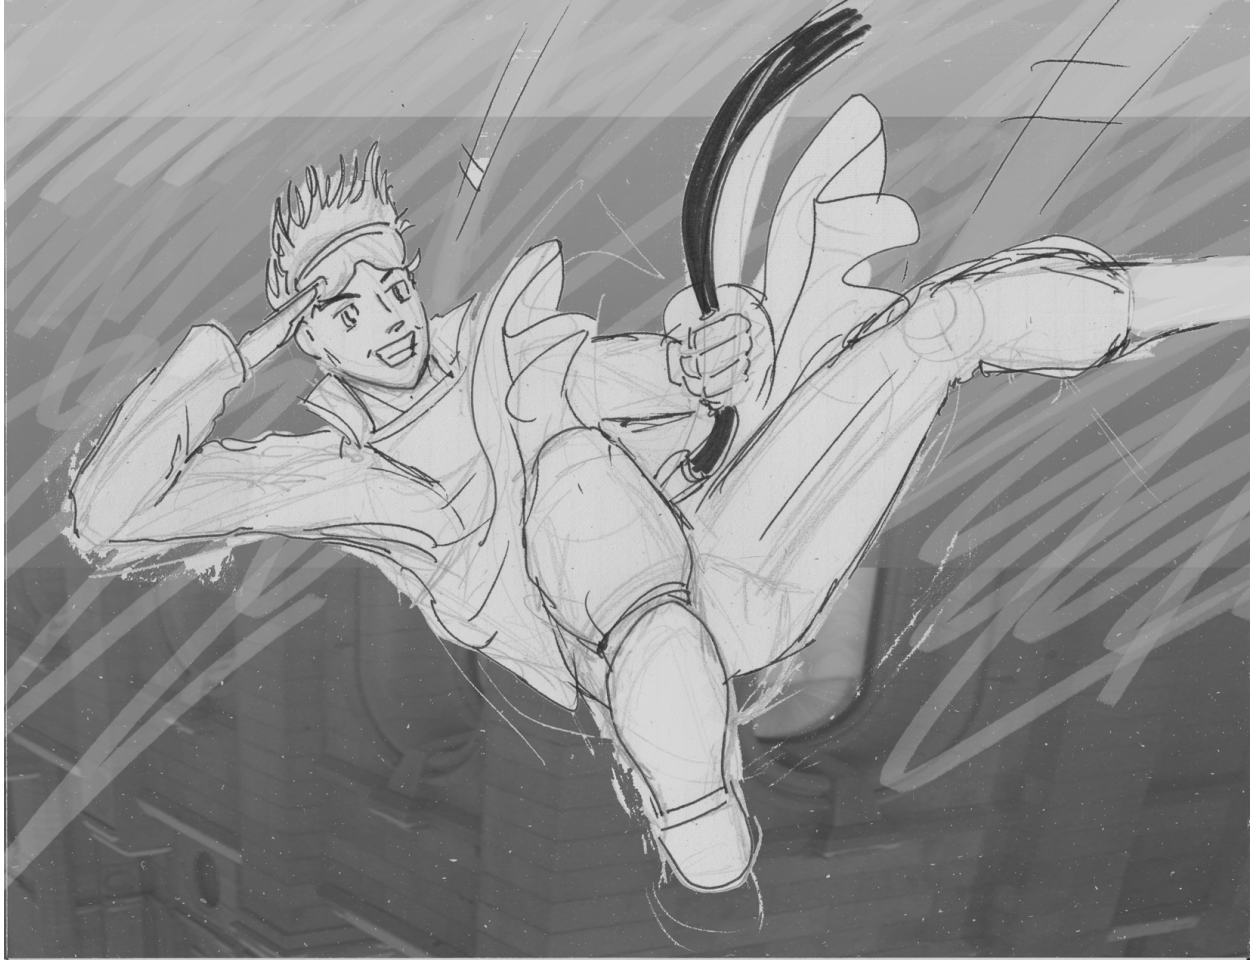

Carl jumps a fence in the alley, and will lead the Brawlers to a tripwire that he set to stop them. A few of the Brawlers were taken out by spilled garbage cans, oil slicks, and hopefully the fence.

In the Outwit segment, Carl leads the Brawlers on a chase through an abandoned construction site, where he takes a convoluted route to confuse them, and then drops a bag of marbles to trip them up.

When Carl leads them to the rooftop, the Brawlers get an unexpected surprise. Carl has set up a bungee cord that he clips into and jumps off the roof.

Carl jumps off the roof and then salutes the Brawlers on his way down. If they have any thoughts of using the cord to follow him, their hopes are dashed when Carl cuts the bungee cord and runs off.

Johnny starts the firefight by shooting two of the Brawlers. As the action ramps up everyone will get in on the action.

All drawings and photographic backgrounds are of my own creation.